What's Happening:

We have had a lot going on in the last two weeks. We are testing out a change with our daily routine. The children were showing interest in planning their day first thing in the morning on a regular basis. As a group, we discussed their ideas and what they thought about the change. It was exciting to see them work together and physically change the schedule on the white board. I do hope they have been sharing with you all the things they have been learning. Besides the themes that we have this month, we have been working hard with our rhyming families. The children have been matching real life items to the family they belong in. For example, bee, tree and tee pee are in the "ee" family. A great way to extend this learning and repetition is with basic nurse rhymes. Studies have shown rhyming is a huge part in becoming a successful reader. So, dust off those Mother Goose Books and take a walk down memory lane with your child.

Happy rhyming!
